NOW AND NEVER.
Not all the music in the world
Sung o'er so sweet and clear,
With all the master's magic wrought,
Can thrill the silent ear.

Not all the sunshine in the skies,
Though falling tenderly
With kiss like lilies breath, can light
The eye that can not see.

Not all the love the great world holds,
With deepest longing self,
And fraught with all that love can mean,
Can reach a loved one dead.

Speak now the word of love and cheer,
Thy heart its sunshine spread,
Swift be their lips their song to sing,
'Till life and love have fled.

SUICIDE

Of Nolin Perrine This Morning
ing a Shock to His Many Friends

The community was startled by the announcement of the suicide of Nolin Perrine at his home in East Fourth street, which occurred about 7 o'clock this morning.

Shortly after breakfast he entered the bathroom and swallowed a dose of cyanide of potassium.

His wife, who was in the kitchen clearing off the breakfast dishes, heard him struggling and fall, and on entering found her husband in the throes of death.

She assisted him to the sitting room where he expired before medical assistance could reach his side.

He had been associated for years with his father in the jewelry business, and later with Mr. Charles Traxel, who took over the Second street store. The fatal poison was secured at the store where it is used in soldering in the jeweler's trade.

Dependancy over business is supposed to have caused the rash act.

He was the only son of ex-Sheriff and Mrs. Daniel Perrine, now residing in Cincinnati. He was a quiet, unassuming young man, and very popular with a large circle of friends. He had a wife, father and mother

The following from this city attended the revival services at the Lewisburg Baptist Church last night: Rev. and Mrs. J. M. Haymore, Miss Ruby Walton, Mrs. Sallie Ricketts, Mrs. D. Brooks, Mrs. Mollie Mitchell and daughter, Allene, John T. Parker and C. N. Bollacker.

IDEAS FOR HOME BUILDERS BY WM. A. RADFORD.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 178 West Jackson boulevard, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

A good front hall, four rooms, and a bathroom downstairs, and three rather large bedrooms upstairs, is a brief description of the interior of the house shown in the accompanying design. Looking at it from the southeast corner it appears especially well provided with verandas; and so it is.
It is a regular summer resort in the summer time, but the verandas are not wide enough to darken the rooms much in winter. Some people have a horror of an overhanging roof to shut out the little light that nature provides between daylight and dark during the fall and early winter months;
but there is a possibility of designing a veranda so it will answer the purpose intended without a corresponding disadvantage.

This is a good, big, square house as dimensions go in these days of high prices—just the kind of house to support a good veranda. In fact, the long veranda gives an air of elegance to what would otherwise be a rather plain exterior. To save expense, the kitchen part is only one story in height, but the house is large enough then for an ordinary family of from four to six adults and children.

A bedroom downstairs is liked by old persons because they object to climbing stairs. This style of house permits the building of a bedroom and bath on the first floor, and still provides for large living rooms conveniently arranged.

Putting the pantry away back in the northwest corner has the advantage of coolness. You cannot have a pantry too cold in a house that is heated by steam, hot water, or warm-air furnace. The arrangement of kitchen, dining room, and pantry must depend to a great extent on the way you want to keep house. If you use a big ice box and take ice the year round, you can manage without a cold pantry; but if you prefer to do without ice during the fall, winter,
and spring months, you want a pantry
like this, with an outside window looking to the north or the east, and you want this window protected by a very fine wire screen, so that you can leave the window open both top and bottom and still keep out the flies and dust.

Second Floor Plan.

the brick would cost at home, and
they pay freight and extra tanning, besides a couple of profits; and the loss from breakage is considerable.
But their pride is satisfied, and they put off quite cheery when some ignorant person admires their good taste.
With good management, however,
and a disposition to take advantage of circumstances, home prices, and home talent, this house should be built in a very satisfactory way for $2,500 or $2,600.

Treatment That Effected a Cure.
The good wife was very ill, so bad that she was having a serious talk with her husband.

"James," she said in a low voice,
"in case of anything happening to me, I think a man of your temperament and domestic nature should marry again, both for your sake and for the sake of our children."
James dashed the moisture from his eyes are replied, "Do you think so, my dear?"

The woman weakly nodded.
"Certainly I do," she said. "Of course after a decent interval."

James' face brightened up.
"There, my dear, that relieves my mind of a great burden!" he said
gleefully. "The little widow next door has acted very friendly toward me since you have been ill. She's not such a fine woman as you are—not so strong natured and intelligent
—but she is a pretty, plump little thing, and I think I'd better give her a hint."

Next day the good wife was able to sit up. The day after she came downstairs. And on the third day she went out for a walk—and out the "little widow next door" dead!—An-

Was Polyphemus a Gorilla?
A German savant has offered a theory interesting to readers of the "Odyssey." He suggests that the one-eyed giant whom Ulysses blinded in his cave on the slopes of Mount Etna was in reality a gorilla. The German contends that the original of Homer's story was a reminiscence of an actual encounter between early civilized men and one of their monstrous prehu-man ancestors. This theory is in opposition to that of Grimm, who held that the story of Polyphemus is a mythic account of the strife of the elements.
It has been pointed out that the fact that gorillas do not now exist near the Mediterranean is not in conflict with the German's argument, since it is well known that in prehistoric times Europe contained many animals that at present are peculiar to Africa and other distant lands.

To Prevent Screws From Rusting.
The best method of keeping small screws, brads and tacks from rusting is to place them in small-wide-mouthed bottles, tightly corked. The bottles should be perfectly dry before using. Sand-paper can be kept perfectly dry and in good working condition by rolling it and keeping it in a wide-mouthed jar and screwing down
the lid.

SHOULDER STRAP COMES BACK NEW MATERIAL FOR NEGLIGEE

Modistes Return to Style of a Few Years Ago, Which Has Much to Recommend It.

You remember the jumper dress
that women liked a few years ago?
It was virtually a skirt; a wide girdle and shoulder straps, and was worn over a blouse of washable fabric. Well, it is here again in a charming revival of style, having profited by its sell for a song. If they are of white or cream or black, large-figured in
pale blue, light green or vivid cerise,
so much the better for you. They'll make up into a stunning negligee of
the sort that cut in two pieces, and
slipping on over the head, buttons
from throat, to shoulder tops and half way down the outer side of the kimono sleeves, with oriental heads of
huge size and lurid tone enhanced
with flecks of gold. About the throat
and the edges of the sleeves place
heavy cordings in silk matching the color of the figure on the madras,
but use no further trimming. The material trims itself. A negligee in this design is unquestionably modest.
It falls straight from the shoulders
to the toes, does not cling to the fig-

Madras Curtains Make Up Into the Very Finest Boudoir Garment
That Can Be Devised.

If you are needing a new negligee don't seek for the material for it in the dress goods department of your favorite shop, but go to your house-furnishings merchant. He will have precisely what you need—a pair of extra curtains in madras—that he'll
sell for a song. If they are of white
or cream or black, large-figured in
pale blue, light green or vivid cerise,
so much the better for you. They'll
make up into a stunning negligee of
the sort that cut in two pieces, and
slipping on over the head, buttons
from throat, to shoulder tops and half
way down the outer side of the kim-
ono sleeves, with oriental heads of
huge size and lurid tone enhanced
with flecks of gold. About the throat
and the edges of the sleeves place
heavy cordings in silk matching the
color of the figure on the madras,
but use no further trimming. The material trims itself. A negligee in
this design is unquestionably modest.
It falls straight from the shoulders
to the toes, does not cling to the figure and may be flung on in a second of time above a princess slip of taffeta or lawn.

Winter Hats.

Most picturesque and becoming are the new plush and velvet hats for the autumn and early winter which are now being shown in the smart shops.
The hats are in small, medium and large shapes, quite soft, so that they can be rolled and crushed to suit the face of the individual wearer. There are small hats with high round crowns, folded in around the top.
Two-toned velvet hats are among the newest models and there is an iridescent blue and black plush hat which is most striking and becoming to the average woman. A large sombrero of green velvet with a facing of black velvet is trimmed with a black leather belt, with leather with a gilt buckle.
The shape is extremely smart. A rather high-crowned narrow brimmed hat of two-toned iridescent plush is in blue and black. The hat has a crown of shot silk and is trimmed with two made plumes of the plush.
A small black plush hat, extremely dashing in effect, has a white satin band inside the brim and three fancy black feathers at one side.

Lace Door Panel.

Very frequently lace door panels
shrink after washing them, making it impossible to use them again.
To prevent this follow these instructions: After removing the panel from the door thoroughly clean the glass.
Wash and starch the lace, slip in the rods immediately and replace the panel on the door.
Care should be observed to pull the lace straight, tacking down the sides,
if necessary, to stretch the panel.
Allow it to dry upon the door.
This gives far better results than to launder the panel in the usual manner.

Effective Bandeau.

Ornaments are always worn in the hair, and a narrow bandeau of velvet is still popular. A Paris house shows a narrow stiff band of blue velvet sewn with colored beads, from the center of which springs up a peacock's feather of gold with the "eye" of the feather in natural colors, a bizarre and striking ornament. Another band of velvet is sewn with brilliant, and a white osprey rises in the middle in a fashion that is both becoming and dignified—which is more than may be said for many fashions of the moment.

Big Muffs.

Muffs will be of more mammoth size
than ever this winter. The furriers have been to that all right. They are also very concerned in working out little muffs for the pulse of high stocks.

HANDS ITCHED AND BURNED

Ahhotsford, Wis.—"My son had eczema on his hands for about one year.
The eczema started with a rash. His hands were sore so he could not close them, and when he wet his hands they hurt him so he could hardly wash. His hands itched and burned just terrible and if he would scratch them, they would break out into sores. He could not get any rest or sleep, and his hands looked quite bad.
"We had medicine and salve and it kept getting worse all the time. I got some Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and after washing his hands with the Cuticura Soap and putting some of the Cuticura Ointment on two times a day and tying cloths on them for about six months they got well and have not broken out since. Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured him entirely." (Signe-

Not a Dry Book.
"This is the most lachrymose novel I've ever read. The heroine weeps in almost every chapter." "Then you certainly can't call it a dry book."

Easy Road in Music.
"My boy Louie is indolent," said the musician, "but I must as he is smart."
"Is he going to follow in your footsteps?"

"No, I learned to play the clarinet and I've got to march at least eight miles every time there is a parade.
Louie is learning the harp, so that they will have to let him sit down."

Diplomacy in Small Things.

Little Eloise Cuy, aged seven years, was visiting her grandmother
in Madison, Va., and was sent to carry a saucer of ice cream to a neighbor.
By the exercise of infinite care she conveyed her burden safely to the house and gave it into the hands of the lady for whom it was intended.
The lady, however, was less careful than Eloise had been, and dropped the saucer and broke it.
"You needn't mind about that,"
said the little diplomat, without an instant's hesitation. "I don't think grandma has any duty to match the saucer. If she has I will go right home and break it myself."—Popular Mag-

Wilson—Oh, he's not dead; it's his

A DOCTOR'S TRIALS. He Sometimes Gets Sick Like Other People.

Even doing good to people is hard work if you have too much of it to do.
An overworked Ohio doctor tells his experience:

"About three years ago as the result of doing two men's work, attending a large practice and looking after the details of another business, my health broke down completely, and I was little better than a physical wreck.

"I suffered from indigestion and constipation, loss of weight and appetite, floating and pain after meals, loss of memory and lack of nerve force for continued mental application.

"I became irritable, easily angered and despondent without cause. The heart's action became irregular and weak, with frequent attacks of palpitation during the first hour or two after retiring.

"Some Grape-Nuts and cut bananas came for my lunch one day and pleased me particularly with the result. I got more satisfaction from it than from anything I had eaten for months, and on further investigation and use, adopted Grape-Nuts for my morning and evening meals, served usually with cream and a sprinkle of salt or sugar.

"My improvement was rapid and permanent, in weight as well as in physical and mental endurance. In a word, I am filled with the joy of living again, and continue the daily use of Grape-Nuts for breakfast and often for the evening meal.

FIND QUEER HOARD

Interesting Discovery in an Old Texas House.

Dagger, Crimson With Blood Rust of Centuries, and Ancient Spanish Pieces of Eight Found in Old Pot.

San Antonio, Texas.—Still crimson with the blood rust of centuries, a dagger was found in the walls of an adobe building in San Antonio, and in another part of the house was found a copper pot containing pieces of eight. It is regarded as the most historical production which Texas has yielded in many years and the coins have been sent to Tiffany in New York for valuation.

Charles Arnold and Gus Loeffel, his brother-in-law, were tearing down an ancient structure, used in bygone days as a fandango hall, when their picks came in contact with something that rang differently from the flat rock which composed part of the walls. They took their pocket knives and scraped away the mortar and discovered what resembled a teapot.

Extracting this vessel from its coating, they dug a flint rock from its opening, where the lid should have been. At first epiderm veils obscured their view, but after wiping these away they could see dimly that there was something at the bottom of the pot. It proved to be eight Spanish coins, covered with dust. How the dust got there it is impossible to say, as the large opening of the teapot was closed and the spout was so small that only a few drops at a time could have been poured from it. And in addition the hole was incised in the solid wall.

Local scientists will tackle the problem of how the spiders entered the pot—whether they were in it before the wall was closed, or whether they crept through some luminous crack and thence into the spout of the pot. Queen sabe?

The dagger has a pearl handle, carved by hand, carrying a feathery design on one side and on the other a shield and leaves. At one end it has a guard almost as large as those of the swords used by the crusaders, bearing a bas relief of a wolf's head. At the other end it has a similar ornament, the head of some animal which has not yet been identified.

The blade is seven inches long, sharp on one side and thick on the other. Its point is yet in fine shape and could do deadly work. It has peculiar red stains, believed to have been caused by blood. This weapon was found near the top of the wall, hidden by mortar, and it is thought it was tossed there for the purpose of concealment.

RARE BLACK WOLF KILLED

Animal Is So Young as to Indicate the Presence of Others in the Vicinity.

Chico, Cal.—William Lewis of Paradise, near here, claims the distinction of killing the first black wolf ever encountered in this portion of the state. He met the animal late at night on the main road leading into Paradise and was especially attracted by its glaring eyes and howling.

Its fur is of the finest texture and the animal itself was apparently young, indicating that there was a family of the species located in the thick forests of the Paradise-Magalia section.

Many barnyard robberies of late are now laid to the door of the unusual animal that more or less inhabits the mountainous regions of cold climates as in Canada and the far north.

IS LITTLEST BABY OF ALL

Champion Lightweight Babe of Medical History Is Born in New York.

New York.—The champion lightweight baby of the entire history of medical practice, according to New York physicians, is being carefully guarded in an incubator at the Lying-in hospital, Second avenue and Seventeenth street, for fear the faint spark of life it possesses may expire at any moment. Nevertheless, its chance for existence seems favorable. It weighs only twenty ounces.

It weighs its present hold on life to Dr. Charles H. Goldsmith of 1910 Lexington avenue, who, first believing the little girl, born prematurely, had come into the world dead, later noticed a slight twitch of one of the eyelids. He then revived the infant by breathing into its mouth. Mrs. Mary O'Connor of 2595 Eighth avenue is the mother of the child, and at the time of its birth was suffering with whooping cough.

After Dr. Goldsmith had been hurriedly summoned to the O'Connor home he told the parents, after careful examination, that the baby was dead. The physician was astonished at the diminutive size of the infant.

An eight-pound baby is not considered a large one, yet this little newborn was only one-sixth the weight of an eight-pound baby. As it lay on soft material arranged on a table, the father, hearing the doctor's verdict, started out to find an undertaker. A few minutes afterwards the physician noticed a slight movement of an eyelid. The father returned a few minutes later, having arranged for the burial, to find the physician working to revive the child, though the appliances usually used in such cases were lacking and there was no time to send for them.

FEW EARN LIVING AT 70

Chicagoan Tells College That 1,550,000 Americans Are Old-Age Victims.

Chicago.—You have one chance in 10,000 of supporting yourself when you are three score and ten, according to information which was imparted to Professor Charles R. Henderson's class in sociology at the University of Chicago.

Supt. William C. Graves of the James C. King Home for Old Men, made the statement in a lecture on "The Broken Family."

"Only one man in 10,000 is self-supporting at the age of seventy years, according to the statistics," said Mr. Graves. "In the United States there are approximately 1,550,000 former wage earners, sixty-five years and older, dependent on public and private charity, at a cost of $220,000,000 a year. There are about 300,000 old people in benevolent institutions and homes in this country. It costs about $50,000,000 a year to care for them."

"Old age seems to be an individual thing to each person reaching it. It is difficult to state that a person is old at sixty or sixty-five or seventy or beyond that."

EEL-EATING CONTEST

Linear Measurements, Not Pounds, Count at Finish.

Winner, Five Feet Ten Inches in Height, Consumes Six Feet Ten Inches of Smoking Fish—All the Waistline Alike.

New York.—Eel eating matches are more or less familiar. Eel eating contests are much less so, for the simple reason that while commonly the pie eating is done in public and for a wager the eel eating is privately done and for fun, though the loser may be required to pay for all the eels eaten. There is a little club composed of half a dozen substantial men, all lovers of sea food, that owns a comfortable bungalow in a pleasant spot on the Long Island shore, in which its members meet occasionally to eat a sea food dinner. They do their own cooking and they are all good cooks, with one or another of them notably able in some specialty. One is particularly good on chowder, others on fish and still others on eels. This club assembled in the bungalow lately for an eel dinner and incidentally for an eel eating contest.

Among fishermen acquainted with the eel in every aspect and among eel lovers generally he is considered as a qualified eel eater who can eat his own length in eels. But of course no man could eat his own length of big eels; the eel for such a test must not be more than half an inch in diameter, which is the standard size for eels to be eaten in eel eating contests. Such is also the size of eel that eel lovers find most agreeable to the taste.

For this particular occasion the club commissioned an eel fisherman to gather eels in sufficient quantity and also those that should fill the requirements, being not more than half an inch in diameter and of uniform size. It took the fisherman three days to do this, though of course in that time he gathered also many larger eels which he could market. The eels for the club he selected by sifting his catch through a sieve with a half-inch mesh.

The club's cooking equipment includes two big frying pans 18 inches in diameter. Two members sat down before the fire with these big frying pans and fried eels, which were kept hot in an oven, and when the eels were all ready the club began to eat. In pie eating and some other similar contests there is usually set a time limit, the winner being the man who eats the greatest number of pies in a given time; but there is no time limit here. The members eat leisurely, for enjoyment, and then when all have finished the measurer measures up the bones which each man has preserved by himself at the table. One lot after another each man's eel bones are stretched out on the table, with the sections set end to end and snugly together, and then the measure of the string is taken.

On this occasion all the men had eaten more than their length of eels with one exception. This member, who stands five feet ten inches in height, had eaten of eels but five feet nine. Probably he could easily have eaten a section or two more and so have exceeded the required standard limit if he had only taken the trouble to keep a little closer mental note of his stacked up bones. But there were other members who had exceeded the standard by considerable, including one man of the same height as the loser, namely, five feet ten, who had eaten six feet ten inches of eels, or one foot more than his own length. This probably constitutes the eel eating record.

MUCH SPEEDIER THAN CABLE

Young Frenchman Invents System of Wireless That Will Revolutionize Present Methods.

Paris.—Julian Bethenod, a young French scientist, employed by the government at the Eiffel tower post, has invented a new system of wireless telegraphy which, it is predicted, will revolutionize existing methods.

It is reported that he has found a way to dispense with the spark, thus simplifying wireless telegraphy as a means of sending messages, and at the same time, as a present, an ultraviolet, transformer, self-induction coil, condenser, oscillator and antenna, only the first and last of these are necessary.

This new machine eliminates interference. It is eliminated, and transmits and receives much faster than the present submarine cables, having capacity of 200 words a minute.

Noted European Physician Locates Most Mysterious Organ in Human Body.

Philadelphia.—Announcement that he has discovered and partly classified the function of the pineal gland, the most mysterious organ of the human body, and heretofore believed functionless, was made by Professor L. Professor Hochwart said he had found the organ to be immediately related to the passions. He also hinted that if anything may ever be learned regarding the origin of what is commonly known as spiritual impulse the mystery surrounding the pineal gland will be entirely cleared away.

PROFITABLE PRODUCTION ON FARM IN SOUTHWESTERN PART OF

Grade Beef-Breed Cows and Good Pure-Bred Angus Bulls Used as Foundation Stock for Operations—Pasture Provided With Shade and Water.

Angus Grass-Fed Steers.

(By L. L. SHOEMAKER, in the Country Gentleman.)

Judicious management, a knowledge of cattle and values, and a natural liking for the work have resulted in the production of baby beef on a southwestern Iowa farm at a profit of $20 a head for several successive years.

We used grade beef-bred cows and good pure-bred Angus bulls as the foundation stock for our operations. We reduced the cost of keeping the cows to a minimum in order to increase the profits on the finished calf. The cows were fed on cheap, home-grown roughages, supplemented in part by a grain ration consisting largely of corn and cottonseed meal fed in moderate quantities during the last few weeks prior to calving and continued until the grass became well grown in the spring. Care against feeding cottonseed meal in heavy quantities prior to calving lessened the danger of abnormal calf birth. Feeding the cows largely on such roughage as oat straw, corn fodder and clover hay during the winter months, and letting them remain on grass as much as possible during the year, reduced the cost of keeping them to $25 a year.

We managed to have most of the calves come in the spring, from March 1st to March 15th, and under our system of managing the cows, they came strong and vigorous. Keeping the cow in good physical condition prior to calving by feeding a ration strong in ash and protein content so as to stimulate the milk flow gave the calf a strong start in life, and also kept the cow in good condition as to tide her over the inclement spring weather, which is the hardest strain upon her. Through a careful management of the bull we succeeded in having the calves come within a short period of each other. He was never allowed to run with the cows during the day. A good blue-grass pasture was provided for him, and a grain ration consisting of oats, bran and cottonseed meal was given during the heavy breeding season.

The calves were allowed to run on the pasture with their mothers after the grass had become well started in the spring and until the flies had become bad and the grass no longer furnished an abundance of green feed. The bull calves were then castrated, and the entire lot were put in a well-grown blue-grass pasture. This was provided with ample shade and available fresh water, but they were allowed to nurse mornings and evenings.

A grain ration consisting of oats, bran and a small amount of shelled corn was distributed in troughs conveniently placed in the pasture. As the calves became older the grain ration was gradually increased. Little trouble was experienced in getting them to eat again, and they were soon eating about three-fourths of a pound of mixed grain per hundred pounds of live weight. To this ration was added a small amount of cottonseed meal later in the fall. We found that such a ration gave the most desirable gains.

When the second crop of clover in the hayfields arrived in the fall the calves were changed to it from the blue-grass pasture. After they had become accustomed to the new feed the weaning was started, the cow being returned occasionally so that she would gradually dry up in good condition. The calves were allowed to graze upon the clover until late fall, in early winter they were given winter quarters. A well-drained lot, sloping to the east and south and provided with an open shed and good water, furnished excellent conditions for winter feeding. The shed floor was kept well drained and bedded down once a week; the water was warmed during freezing weather, a very important matter, and roughages were supplied in generous amounts.

By the first of January our calves weighed from 650 to 700 pounds and were in thrifty, growthy condition, though not fat. They had retained, however, the natural calf fat which is necessary in making the best quality of baby beef at a profit. The grain ration was increased and cottonseed meal was substituted for the oats, making a grain ration of two-thirds corn and one-third cottonseed meal by weight, fed at the rate of a pound per hundred pounds of live weight.

Various roughages, all of which were grown on the farm, were fed. The corn fodder, usually shredded, was fed in the early winter together with clover hay, and later in the spring oat straw was given instead of the corn fodder.

The following summer the calves were given a good blue-grass pasture and in addition a liberal grain ration. The ration was not changed in composition from that previously fed. When the grass was in the flush of growth the grain ration was somewhat decreased. During the entire grass season personal attention was given to the feeding so that the calves would not be overfed. If overfed the cost is not only increased but the steers get out of condition and frequently will not gain so well afterward.

They were ripe and well finished by September 1st and weighed from 1,200 to 1,250 pounds, a desirable weight for such youngsters. They commanded the top price for such light-finished calves. In computing the cost for our production we found that each calf had eaten from 27 to 30 bushels of corn, valued at $16.20; 6 bushels of oats at $2.40; cotton seed meal, $7.50; grass, $10; hay and feeder, $10, which, together with the cost of keeping the cow and the interest, made a total cost for production of about $75. Our young stock varied in price from $6.75 to $9 a hundredweight, making an average of $7.50, which gave us a cash value of about $36 a head. This left a total of over $20 clear profit, charging our work against the manure produced and the satisfaction of seeing the grains and roughages marketed at home and the land appreciably increased in fertility and condition.

SELECTING GOOD DAIRY ANIMALS

Systematic Plan of Examining Calves Needed to Bring Herd Improvement.

(By W. M. KELLY.)

Many dairymen make a practice of raising every heifer calf and fail to get results. Then they select the heifer calves from the best producing cows and get nearer to what they want, but still, there are many inferior cows raised by them.

It is not until we begin to carefully examine every heifer calf that we can conduct any systematic plan of improving the quality of the dairy herd, for, unless the calves are good individuals and have sound and strong, vigorous constitutions, no matter how liberally they are fed, some will fail to come up to the qualities of their dams.

Every heifer calf should be carefully examined and if they show signs of weakness they should not be raised. Open their mouths, and if you find, after examining their teeth, that you can see but four of the milk teeth, you can make up your mind that such a calf is hardly worth raising.

Many raise their calves, but few turn out to be profitable cows. Next examine the navel and teats. If the teats are not placed in their right position do not waste your time and food trying to make a good cow out of such a calf.

When we find a heifer calf that comes up to our standard or requirements and when we decide to keep it we must not forget that its value as a cow depends largely upon the treatment that it receives during the first two years of its life.

Calves must be well cared for and fed in such a manner that they will never lose their calf flesh.

After they are a few months old they should be turned out and allowed plenty of exercise and good air so that they may build up strong muscles and good strong organs of respiration.

soon become accustomed to their neckwear. Another factor which makes them of value, so Mrs. Fox tells us, is that the turkeys can be easily located. The tinkle of the bells can be heard for quite a distance. She uses these bells on the hens, and when the flocks are full grown, as in the fall, the bells on the mature fowls for the flocks.

For the flocks, gooseberries—a fruit.

"I was never a woman who took matters neglected by a bashful suitor into her own hands and wound up the business so neatly and in so novel a manner that she won plaudits from everybody who ever heard the story."

"This woman was known the country over as Aunt Patsy Mitchell. Aunt Patsy lived alone in a big red brick house that was set down in the middle of an immense yard. The yard at one time was well shaded, but the trees had been felled one by one until nothing remained standing but a few cedar trees and one monstrous oak. This oak stood in a corner not far from the front fence. It was the most perfect specimen of fine, symmetrical forest tree to be found in that part of the county, and Aunt Patsy had always been very proud of it. It was a grand type of endurance, she had often been heard to say. 'Why, perfect as that tree is, it ought to be standing 500 years from now.' Knowing those to be her sentiments, the surprise of the neighbors was unbounded when it was learned that Aunt Patsy had sent for two woodcutters and had ordered them to chop down the oak tree three feet from the ground."

A few days after the tree had been felled and dragged away I was walking past Aunt Patsy's house with Walter Craig. Craig was a man who had managed my father's farm for several years. From the top of his head to the sole of his foot Craig presented a very peculiar appearance, but his most striking single feature was his mouth. That organ was kept wide open day and night, sleeping or waking. As we neared the house we saw Aunt Patsy standing at the front gate. We went up and stepped on the other side.

"Aunt Patsy," said Craig, "I don't want to be pryin', but I'd like to know what you had that tree wheeked over for?"

"I reckon," she said, "there's a whole raft of people hereabouts 'd like to know that very same thing."

"Well," returned Aunt Patsy, "I don't wish any of 'em any harm, so I do hope they won't hold their breath till they find out. Not but what they're goin' to some day, for they are, but they'll have to bide my time."

"Craig nodded respectfully. 'And what you goin' to do with the stump, Aunt Patsy?' he asked. 'You ought to have it drug out.'

"That was in the fall. All winter the oak stump stood in Aunt Patsy's front yard, bleak and drear, but early in the spring two men who were used to 'clearing off' were called in for consultation, and Aunt Patsy gave them instructions to burn out the heart of the stump. A week later the only thing remaining of the prize oak was an outer shell about four inches thick."

"I'm goin' to get some bees," said Aunt Patsy, when Craig and I stopped at her gate soon afterward and asked her about the skeleton. 'I've always wanted a swarm, and I calculate to turn this stump into a hive for 'em. I'll have the top roofed over. It seems to me it'll be a real handy place for 'em.'

"The following day Aunt Patsy went into town. She was gone a week, and when she returned she was provided with a box full of chisels and other tools, of whose use even the village carpenter was ignorant. When the first warm spring days came Aunt Patsy began her work on the unique beehive. For two weeks she labored, cutting and chiseling the hard wood with rare skill and patience. By and by it became apparent that the side of the hive facing the turnpike was taking on the semblance of a human face. Aunt Patsy smiled grimly when Craig leaned over the fence one night and asked her whose portrait she was carving."

"It's the face of the man I'm goin' to marry," she said.

"That report spread rapidly and thereafter Aunt Patsy's open-air studio was thronged with people anxious to discover through the lineaments of the sculptured face some clue to the identity of the intended husband. I don't know anything about the work of professional sculptors, but we saw before us, as if in life, the squinting eyes, the flaring ears, the high forehead and the gaping mouth of Craig. My bare feet scarcely touched the turnpike as I ran home to tell the news. I found Craig out back of the orchard plotting."

"Craig," I guessed. "It's you, Aunt Patsy has been carving your face. It's you she's going to marry."

"Craig dropped the lines and his mouth flew wider open than ever."

"She's left your mouth open just like that," I screamed. "She says that's where the bees are to go in it."

"Craig said never a word even then. He left the horses standing in the furrow and ran out to the pike and started toward Aunt Patsy's on thelope. It was past noon when he returned."

"It's all up with me," he said, solemnly. "It does look like me. It really was me who had fixed her mind on 'I'd only know.'"

"What would you have done, Craig, if you had known?" I asked.

"I guess maybe I'd asked her first," said Craig.

Some on the Doctor, Too. A doctor who had a custom of cultivating the lawn and walk in front of his home every spring engaged O'Brien to do the job. He went away for three days and when he returned found O'Brien waiting for his money. The doctor was not satisfied with his work and said:

"O'Brien, the whole walk is covered with gravel and dirt and in my estimation it's a bad job."

O'Brien looked at him in surprise for a moment and replied:

"Shure, doc, there's many a bad job of yours covered with gravel and dirt."

A fool and her money frequently marry into the nobility.

Part of the Truth. "Robert, dear, how do you suppose these dozens and dozens of empty bottles ever got into our cellar."

"Why, I don't know, my dear. I never bought an empty bottle in my life."—Fun.

Accounted For. "I will not let my wife go to these fashionable bridge parties."

"I'm glad you take that stand. So you think it is immoral to gamble?"

"No, but she's such a wretched player."

Serious Lack. An old Englishwoman, who was extremely stout, was making vain efforts to enter the rear door of an omnibus. The driver leaned over good-naturedly, and cried:

"Try sideways, mother, try sideways!"

The old woman looked up breathlessly, and replied:

"Why, bless ye, James, I ain't got no sideways!"—Youth's Companion.

"Didn't take the poem, did he?"

"No. Read three lines of it, banded it back to me and said: 'Friend, here's $2. You need it worse than I do.'"

Height of Assurance. A man was charged with stealing a horse, and after a long trial the jury acquitted him. Later in the day the man came back and asked the judge for a warrant against the lawyer who had successfully defended him.

"What's the charge?" inquired the judge.

"Why, your honor," replied the man, "you see, I didn't have the money to pay him his fee, so he took the horse I stole."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Liquid Measure. It was the time of the singing lesson at the local council school, and the teacher was explaining to the young hopefuls that if a "treble" and "alto," a "tenor" and a "bass" sung together, their united efforts would constitute a quartet.

There seemed no trouble about that, and the teacher thought the class was getting on very nicely.

"Now, Jimmy, leave off pinching your brother's leg and listen to me," said she. "If a bass and tenor sang together, what would you call that?"

Jimmy was the son of the local milkman, and a bright lad withal. His answer was not long in coming.

"Please, miss," said he, "that would be a 'pintette'."

It was perfectly natural for T. Roosevelt to see only George W. Perkins after the Bull Moose's arrival at Sagamore Hill. He closed his doors to every one else and even while his bullet wound was bleeding he "talked with Perkins" the International Harvester Trust magnate. Then this blatant demagog will get out and tell the people how he hates the trusts and what should be done to them and what he'll do then when he gets back in White House, etc.

THE NEW NEWSPAPER LAW.

One would judge, in reading over the new postal law devoted to newspapers, that Congress was mad at them. That vindictive body has filled the law with demands upon the newspapers for information that is private property, in the purest sense of the word, and it is simply tyranny to take it away.

If the law had provided penalties for printing pictures of prize fighters and inserting in-cedent or fraudulent cures, it would have done a public benefit, but turning out on the common all the business of a newspaper is quite akin to a piece of impertinence. Such a thing is of doubtful constitutionality, and that question is to be tried out in the courts.—Ohio State Journal.

TAFT PROSPERITY vs. WILSON HARD TIMES

Cynthiana Democrat: The Maysville Ledger declares "one Wilson tariff law took beef from the poor and gave them soup." Ridiculous, of course; but if true, the Wilson law was more nourishing than the Payne-Aldrich law, which takes beef from the poor and gives them the Ha, Ha.

Cynthiana Democrat: A dry goods merchant told us Monday that last week's business was the best he has enjoyed in Cynthiana, and he felt mighty good over it.

Our friend The Democrat has itself waxed fat under the beneficent results of Republican Protection, which reaches the remotest corners of business. The above two items clipped from the same issue of The Democrat shows the utter inconsistency of the Democratic wail of "taking from the poor and giving to the rich."

There never was such prosperity and there isn't a single business man in Cynthiana, or a farmer in Harrison who, if he tells the truth, but what will admit that every line of trade is flourishing to such an extent that it would be commercial suicide to overthrow the prosperity we are now enjoying and replace it with so-called Democratic free-trade, or what is as bad, the so-called "tariff for revenue, only."

The Cynthiana Democrat cannot cite one instance during the last fifty years, when under a Democratic Presi-

How well I remember last fall at the rally I walked in line with the workmen sure And felt just as proud as the King at beholding The fall of the rich and the rise of the poor. Sure, that's what they told me was meant by the victory And wonder, I was elated at that As I stepped to the music just like and old sear And wore a big rooster on top o' me hat.

I invited the boss with his riches and comforts— No share of the profits I'd get, if I agin I voted to keep up the tariff that only Protected the bosses and burdened the min. I'm sure I'd get even now w'd ye, me honey, I'll vote just as sure as my name is Pat, For Grover, and then at the ratification I'll wear a big rooster on top o' me hat.

I done it, had luck to the day and hour, I'd gladly recall the same vote if I could, And once again hear the old steam whistle soundin' That called me to work when the times they were good. The boss he looks worried, the foreman he looks som; The old mill's deserted, and gloomy at that, And all I have left for the share of me glory Is the old battered rooster I wore on me hat.

I mustered up courage to spake to the foreman, And ask him how long he would be idle, (You see The mill had been closed for a fortnight, and Loafin wid not a cent comin' was tellin on me.) He says to me, you and I will both suffer, Me business is crippled me credit is flat, And if you get hungry, you know, he said slyly Ye can ate the old rooster ye wore on yer hat.

So, there's the whole story and none can deny it, The truth must be told, though the Heavens should fall We made a mistake in defeatin' the party That gave us protection, good money and all. In four years from now ye may talk till yer spacheless And argufy until ye'er as gray as a rat, But if that party is again triumphant, The devil of a rooster ye'll see in me hat.

It cost an Indian cook $20 to bite a chambermaid, and the consensus of opinion is that he didn't get his money's worth.

Political Pickings

Herald-Star, Steubenville: A Democratic tariff always kills industry.

Pittsburgh Gazette-Times: This Republican prosperity looks good enough to keep.

Ohio State Journal: Where a candidate's campaign fund is, there will his heart be also.

Marion Star: Is Governor Wilson promising anything now that wasn't promised in 1892? Remember the four years of free soup houses.

Urbana Citizen: The Democratic party offers no answer to the question what shall be come of the factories that will be nailed up under a tariff for revenue only.

NO EXCUSE THIS TIME

The Past Shows That Democratic Success and National Disaster Are Inseparable.

For those who voted into power a Democratic low tariff administration twenty years ago there was the excuse that they had no lesson of experience to warn them from their course. More than thirty years had passed since the enactment of a protective tariff; industries were flourishing, wages rising and the treasury had a considerable surplus. There was a feeling that Cleveland had not been accorded a fair opportunity to prove that "a tariff for revenue only" would benefit the country, and while the issue was still in the balance came a desperate labor struggle, amounting to a local war to inflame the public mind and evoke a demand for some action on the part of the national government to curb the power of large corporations. The Sherman law, enacted by the Republican Congress, and signed by President Harrison July 2, 1890, was a force, but its powers had not been invoked, and its scope had not been determined by the highest judicial authority. Mr. Cleveland's supporters argued that radical reduction of the tariff would restrain corporate greed and prove a cure-all for economic evils. Mr. Cleveland himself took substantially this ground in his inaugural address.

The facts of history are that the tariff was reduced to a revenue basis, the Sherman law remained dormant, capital shrank from investment, factories were closed or ran on short time, business languished because very few had money to buy, prices went down for the same reason, the farmer could not sell his produce, and hundreds of thousands of unemployed workers had to live on the savings of former prosperity or, if they had no savings, on charity. A large number of the unemployed formed what was known as "Coxey's army" and marched on Washington to demand relief.

Such were the conditions under the last Democratic administration, and the people waited longingly and impatiently for that four years to pass. Knowing that modified free trade had proved a failure, the Democrats offered free silver as their next panacea, but the people would have none of it and when 1896 came Republican rule and Republican policies were voted in with a whoop.

Fifteen years have passed since a protective tariff was restored in 1897. Under President Taft the nation has achieved a height of prosperity far exceeding any in the past. Every legitimate industry is active, wages are higher than ever before, and the savings banks teem with thousands of millions of dollars of the wage earners' money. The Sherman act has been and is being enforced against every violator, and important legislation has been enacted for the greater protection of employees of public service corporations within the jurisdiction of federal authority.

With the lesson of the last Democratic administration before the people a step backward in the same direction would have no sensible excuse. When disaster followed in the wake of Cleveland's second election the plea of ignorance could be offered for the false step that had invited the lean four years of misfortune. A similar plea could not be offered in the future, should a majority decide to make the trial of another Democratic administration. In view of past experience such a change would not be from a certainty to an uncertainty. It would be from a certainty of prosperity, industrial activity and good times generally to a certainty of depression, industrial paralysis, general reaction and privation. "I told you so!" could point with accusing and unerring finger to the costly and painful lesson of 1893-97, whose moral had been set at naught, and those who had brought about the new era of wretchedness could offer no palliation for their folly.

Happily all signs point to a continuance of the present fortunate conditions under the guidance of President Taft whose sound, sane and impartial administration of affairs has made these conditions possible. The American people are not going to make a change simply for the sake of change. From every part of the country comes assurance that the Republican party is gaining in renewed strength every day and will go to the polls in November to roll up a substantial majority for Taft, prosperity and progress.

"We denounce the profligate waste of the money wrung from the people by oppressive taxation through the lavish appropriations of recent Republican congresses, which have kept the people in poverty and reduced the purchasing power of the people's toll."—The Baltimore more platform. Whereupon, that job being out of the way, the Democratic Congress proceeded to pass more appropriation bills, producing a net increase over the last Republican Congress of $9,533,261.94.

Those political advisers who told Woodrow Wilson to bring the tariff to the front are having the time of their lives explaining that they didn't know it was loaded.

Press dispatches say that Candidate Wilson spent Wednesday at Princeton revising his speeches. Revising the tariff out of them, probably.

The spectacle of the third term chiding another candidate for misquoting him possesses an element of humor.

The new Pittsburgh & Cincinnati Packet Company, with $3,000,000 capital, has suc-

ets that operate out of Pittsburgh, Penn.

The company had two good steamers, the Steel City and Queen City, to start with. Then it purchased the steamer Lorena, that operated in the Muskingum River, and the steamer
Admiral Dewey, which is placed in the Parkersburg trade. Then it purchased the steamer Kanawha from Captain William Roe, who has received a nice cash bonus, and he is to be General Superintendent of the line. He is a practical steamboat man, well acquainted in Upper Ohio River trade.

The new company has no option on Captains
Pope and Maddy's steamers Ohio and Dick Powell, which have been rebuilt on the Parkersburg dry dock and are about ready to be launched. It has purchased the steamer City of Parkersburg, that has been rebuilt at Mobile, Ala., and will be launched in a few days. Captain Kraft will enter her in the Parkersburg and Pittsburgh trade in place of steamer Dewey.

order to safeguard their health, to regulate child labor and make the provisions thereof effective, as far as they relate to the city of Lexington, is being inquired into by State

Miss Nave visited the Court-house Wednes-

which Miss Nave at once became interested

In her talk with Judge Scott, Miss Nave said much of her work to the larger cities of the State was in harmony with Juvenile Court work and that the two functions were closely related. Miss Nave will visit all public places that her brief visit will permit in an inspection of buildings where young women are employed to see if they are provided with such precau-

State headquarters in Louisville.

Miss Nave can be seen at the Phoenix Hotel

ANCIENT EMPIRE BURIED IN GUATEMALAN JUNGLES

THE recent experience of a young American in the great unknown district of Peten, in Guatemala, has furnished for science one of the most valuable records in years regarding the life of what is perhaps the most ancient race of human beings in existence.

In a trip just completed, in which he spent more than two years in the jungles of a territory whose mystery has for years repelled as well as attracted the adventurous, Russell Hastings Millward, America's youngest explorer, has not only captured the world's milagro record by traveling across more than three thousand miles of unknown country, but has opened up for the merchant and archaeologist a land whose wealth has hitherto only been guessed at, says the New York Tribune.

The popular impression that there is no more work for the twentieth century explorer could find no better refutation than in the exploit of this young man. The district of Peten, lying to the westward of British Honduras, between the Caribbean coast and the Bay of Campeche, has been known since time immemorial to all Central Americans as "The Mystery." There Millward has located lakes and mountains whose existence has hitherto been a matter of rumor only. For the first time a white man has penetrated those fastnesses and seen the ruins of temples and palaces which, now overgrown and buried under the foliage of the jungle, were once the centers of magnificent cities. He has not only outlined the extent of the once flourishing empire of the Maya race, but of importance to the world of commerce, he has practically opened up a new field whose riches will in a few years be one of the chief assets of the Guatemalan government.

To see this great unknown jungle with his own

there grew trees a thousand years old. In Maya times each of the artificial mounds or pyramids was crowned by a temple. The massive stone blocks employed in the construction of these were used by the Spanish conquistadores in the erection of their own homes. Merida, in fact, got its name from the old Spanish city which was long known as the "Rome of Spain." Its unique replica in the new world was so filled with magnificent Indian temples and palaces that the dazed Spaniards likened it to the old world city.

When Palenque, in the neighboring department of Chiapas, was discovered by a party of Spanish travelers in 1720 the existence of a Maya empire was unknown. There had never been any mention of its existence in the reports of the Spanish invaders, and there was no tradition even that it had ever been. Palenque is thought to have been abandoned as early as the twelfth century, and to this day it is not known by what name it was called.

At the feet of Millward in his two years of fighting the untrodden jungles and wastes of Peten and yielded nothing more than the knowledge of these old stone cities it would have been of priceless value, according to archaeologists, in making possible a study of Maya history and culture. So far they are almost as much a mystery as they were two hundred years ago. The elaborate engravings and petroglyphs which mark the buried temples and palaces are undecipherable, and what little history of the movements of the Mayas and their ancestors, their life and art, has survived has been only in the form of legends kept alive by obscure Maya tribes.

Mr. Millward's explorations have established the fact that the confines of the Maya empire extended far north of the belt of towns and cities whose ruins dot the northern coast toward the Bay of Campeche.

In the course of his explorations Millward came upon more than three hundred groups of ruins, which mark the site of what were once villages and towns of from 1,500 to 15,000 population each. The latter have all the characteristics of great centers of a highly developed life. As in the famous Palenque, many of the ruins in this hitherto undiscovered land which Millward penetrated are notable in their dimensions, decorations and suggestions of the high degree of civilization which created them. But no ever, owing to the superstition of the Mayas in his party, he was unable to give them more than scant attention.

For four months Millward and his men toiled through forests whose richness he declares is not even suspected by people familiar with adjoining countries. Immense mahogany trees of a size and quality unapproached by anything known to commerce grow on every side. Rosewood, ebony, cedar, logwood, chicle, cacao and rubber trees of dimensions unknown to the famous district of Quintana Roo, extended far northward into the districts which he afterward explored. Orchids of the most delicate hue, a half dozen of whose bulbs would make a small fortune for a Fifth Avenue florist, trailed from the trees and dangled the path as to be a nuisance.

Four months and a half from the time they left Belize, Millward and his men came out of the jungle at Lakuna Carmona, near the Bay of Campeche, in the Gulf of Mexico. There they put in a month of good rest. Several of the men had died from fever and exposure, and a percentage of the mules had been lost. The trip, however, was a marked success. Preparations were at once made for the return trip to Belize, and for this Millward mapped out a route which would take him across about sixty miles further to the north.

It was when a month and a half inland on this second trip that there occurred one of the most important incidents of the enterprise. This was the discovery of four large and hitherto unknown lakes. Here, again, Millward found that their existence, if not their location, was already known to his Mayas under the name of "The Four Sisters."

Maya villages continued to dot the jungles as the party progressed eastward, and in all of them the explorer was well received. As Millward worked further on in the general direction of Belize, his destination, and began to approach the other coast he came upon occasional settlements of Caribs. In physique and strength he considers these men far superior to the Mayas.

The new territory, whose resources have been revealed through the enterprise of this young explorer, is believed to be one of the most valuable finds, commercially and historically, of many decades. The untold riches of its forests are not only accessible, but Mr. Millward is likely to prove to a large extent its developer as well as its discoverer, since he already is at work on plans for the establishment of a direct route overland from the Caribbean Sea to the Gulf of Mexico, which would open up the greater part of the region to travel and commerce.

SUCCESS JUDICIOUS FARMING IN WESTERN CANADA IT IS CERTAIN.

The story of the Big Farmer in Western Canada, and the immense profits he has made in the growing of grain, has been told and retold. He has been found in all parts of the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. His splendid farm buildings have been pictured, his traction outfits described and his princely surroundings, resultant of his success in growing grain, have been portrayed by letter, press and camera. It certainly is not to his discredit that by successfully applying common sense and up-to-date methods to the conditions that climate, a good soil, and splendid market have placed at hand, that he has made the best use of them. He is not too proud to admit that he came to the country a very few years ago handicapped as to money, leaving behind him unpaid mortgages in his old home land (which are now wiped out), and he is still today the same good-hearted fellow he was in the days that he had to work for a neighbor, while the neighbor broke the land on his homestead, which went to make up the settlement duties.

Then, there, too, is the farmer and the farmer's son, already wealthy, who has bought large holdings in Western Canada, in other Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, who has made forty to one hundred per cent, on his investment, whose big grain crops and whose immense cattle herds are helping to improve the country. Health and strength, energy and push, and bull dog grit are as essential in Western Canada as in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, or any of the states from which so many of these people come, and then, when you have added to that a fair amount of means, with which to make a start, the land which is only waiting for the skill of the husbandman will quickly respond.

But there is the smaller farmer, the man who has not made sufficient in four or five years, that he might comfortably retire if he felt like it. There are many of them in all the three Provinces. It is not the less to his credit that he has earned his homestead by the three years residence, that he is free from debt, and has a reasonable bank account. He, too, came to the country handicapped by debts, and with very little means. He is contented, has a good home, land free of encumbrance, some stock, and with good prospects. One of these writes: "I formerly lived near Dayton, Ohio, on a rented farm, had as good a chance as the average renter, but after ten years of hard work, satisfied myself that if I ever expected to secure a home, I would have to undertake something else. Hearing of Western Canada, I investigated, and seven years ago last Spring settled in a homestead and purchased (on time) an adjoining half section, arriving with a carload of household effects and farm implements, including four horses and three cows, and $1,800 in money—my ten years' work in Ohio."

"The first year our crops gave us a good start, the second year 100 acres of wheat gave us $1,800; no failure of crop since starting here. I have now 22 head of horses, 15 head of cattle, and 35 hogs. We own 1,120 acres of land, and have same all under cultivation. Was offered at one time $35.00 per acre for a half section where we live, and all the other land could be sold today on present market at $30.00 per acre. Should we care to dispose of our holdings, could pay all debts and have over $30,000 to the good, but the question is where could we go to invest our money and get as good returns as here?"

"We have equally as good, if not better prospects for crop this year, as we had three years ago, when our wheat reached from 30 to 48 bushels per acre. I never believed such crops could be raised until I saw them myself. I had 15 acres that year that made 60 bushels to the acre. Our harvest will be ready by the 12th. We have this season in crop 400 acres of wheat, 125 of oats, 90 of flax, and run three binders, with four men to do the stocking."

"We certainly like this country, and the winters, although the winters are cold at times, but we do not suffer as one would think. What we have accomplished here can be duplicated in almost any of the new districts. If anyone doubts anything I have said in this letter, tell them to come here, and I can prove every word I have written."

"Do you think there is any such thing as financial genius?"
"I am sure there is. I know a young man who has it in a marked degree. After he had persuaded a beautiful daughter of one of our most prominent jewelers to become his wife he went around and induced the old man to let him have an engagement ring at the cost price."
"I don't see any indication of remarkable financial genius about that."

Accelerated Brain Activity.
In the early days of Wisconsin, two of the most prominent lawyers of the state were George B. Smith and I. S. Sloan, the latter of whom had a habit of injecting into his remarks to the court the expression, "Your honor, I have an idea." A certain case had been dragging along through a hot summer day when Sloan sprang to his feet, with his remark, "Your honor, I have an idea."

Smith immediately bounded up, assumed an impressive attitude, and in great solemnity said:
"May it please the court, I move that a writ of habeas corpus be issued by this court immediately to take the learned gentleman's idea out of solitary confinement."—Popular Magazine.

The Farmer's Search.
While plowing, a Crawford county farmer near Helper had the misfortune to lose a small part from his cultivator in the plowed ground. Soon a neighbor came by. "Lost something?" he asked. Soon another came by and asked the same question. And then another. Pretty soon a man he didn't like anyhow approached. "Lost something?" he asked. The farmer looked up in supreme disgust. "Oh, no; just digging worms for my pet buzzard," he replied.—Kansas City Star.

THE PALACE GROUP AT PALENQUE

eyes, thus doing what no white man had ever done before, the young explorer left New York two years ago. He went straight to Belize, a town on the Caribbean coast of British Honduras, and there, while making arrangements for the expedition, he met Claudio Urrutia, government surveyor for Guatemala, who had made short trips inland and who helped get together men, pack animals and provisions for the plunge into Peten. Within a few weeks seventy-five men and a hundred mules had been collected and everything was in readiness for the start.

With all his knowledge of the natives, which he has acquired in numberless shooting and exploring expeditions in the Central American country during previous years, Millward had hardly reckoned upon the difficulties which faced him in his determination to see this land of mystery. "El Peten" it was called. What a paralyzing effect this unknown country would have upon his men he did not realize until he was some weeks on his way into the jungles. As settlement after settlement was left behind, and the train of mules and men moved further and further and further into the black uplands and through the tangle of dense swamps, the problem of averting the ever-threatening mutiny of the men became more pressing.

In contrast to the Caribs, or coast natives, the party contained a large percentage of Mayas of pure blood. Not only did they hold aloof from their Carib companions, but the consciousness that the white man was leading them up into the "country sacred, according to tradition, to their ancestors, who would avenge the insult of trespass, terrified them. When night came on they were usually in a state of panic, and during the day the slightest accident out of the ordinary served to put them on their guard against some imaginary evil. Millward, talking to them in their language, tried repeatedly to discover the cause of their fears. The nearest he came to it was on one occasion when, ascending a ridge of land one noon, his machete men suddenly stopped and refused to go any further.

He had been busy with his instruments, and the first he noticed of impending trouble was when he looked to see his four machete men huddled together talking in an undertone. He ordered them to go ahead, but they drew closer together, giving every indication of terror. Millward approached and asked them what the trouble was, but they refused to talk. Knowing that while these Mayas might be coaxed or led almost anywhere, it was a waste of time to try to force them into anything, he calmly sat down and had a smoke. After a little the Indians also sat down and began to smoke, but all the while casting glances about them which seemed to indicate that they expected momentarily to be annihilated.

Finally, after using all the eloquence of which he was capable, Millward was able to calm their fears and get them to tell him the secret of their strange actions. Little by little he learned that years and years before—even the men themselves crossing the ridge alone and sending the Mayas around the hill to meet him on the other side. But it was during the nights that the effect of the jungle upon the men was most evident. In some respects their superstitions were justified by the unearthly sunset effects and the appearance of the sky at night. The sun sank in a blaze of glory, followed almost immediately by the gloom of midnight. With the arrival of darkness the appearance of the constellations, large and wonderfully brilliant, was awe-inspiring. Far off on the northern horizon the north star appeared, while on the other side of the zenith sparkled the Southern Cross, for this strange country is said to be the only spot on the globe where this combination of planets is visible. The Mayas, alive to every new occurrence, were quick to notice this first night when camp was pitched on an upland above the jungle, and for hours they discussed the phenomenon, squatting round the fires and looking up at the stars.

By this time the expedition had begun to penetrate the forbidden country, and almost immediately the first signs of an ancient civilization appeared.

One day Millward and his men, hacking their way forward, came out suddenly into a little glade in the woods, in the center of which stood a large cylindrical stone. Its sides and upper surface were a solid mass of exquisite carving, in which the figures of birds, flowers and the form of the serpent were repeated in a riot of designs. On the top of the stone a sloping basin was hollowed out, and from this ran a channel to the outer edge. There was no room for doubt that it was one of the ancient sacrificial stones of the Mayas, and that the natural glade in which it had rested for centuries was once the sylvan holy of holies of the Maya priests of the locality, where they "averted evil" to their people by human sacrifices.

It was the finding of this sacrificial stone that introduced the first of the stone villages. Although literally imbedded under the rank undergrowth of the jungle, enough was uncovered to show that at some time it must have been a place of importance. Ruined columns lay about, and great slabs of granite, some of them weighing many tons, were scattered in irregular heaps. The wavering lines of broken slabs and columns which in places showed through the foliage indicated the general outline of streets. In the decoration and carving of these slabs there was every mark of an art which, although in its form widely at variance with that of the Egyptians, is perhaps as old. There were indications, too, of a culture as ancient.

At the time of the conquest of the Mayas, in a warfare which began about 1540 and continued for years, a city called Tihoo, on whose site the Spanish Merida is now located, is supposed to have been the capital of the empire. The old Spanish chroniclers relate that the palaces and pyramids of the Maya city were so ancient that from the mounds built by the earliest inhabitants did not know how long—a great Maya hunter had been prowling through that part of the jungle. On the ridge of land before them some jungle beast leaped out upon him and killed him. According to the machete men, therefore, this hunter's fierce spirit was still roaming that hillside, raging in its agony and jealousy of any mortal presence. Should a man attempt to go up that hillside and cross that ridge some horrible doom which only a spirit could invent would befall him. The men ended by flatly refusing to venture upon the highland, and at last Millward compromised by crossing the ridge alone and sending the Mayas around the hill to meet him on the other side. But it was during the nights that the effect of the jungle upon the men was most evident. In some respects their superstitions were justified by the unearthly sunset effects and the appearance of the sky at night. The sun sank in a blaze of glory, followed almost immediately by the gloom of midnight. With the arrival of darkness the appearance of the constellations, large and wonderfully brilliant, was awe-inspiring. Far off on the northern horizon the north star appeared, while on the other side of the zenith sparkled the Southern Cross, for this strange country is said to be the only spot on the globe where this combination of planets is visible. The Mayas, alive to every new occurrence, were quick to notice this first night when camp was pitched on an upland above the jungle, and for hours they discussed the phenomenon, squatting round the fires and looking up at the stars.

By this time the expedition had begun to penetrate the forbidden country, and almost immediately the first signs of an ancient civilization appeared.

One day Millward and his men, hacking their way forward, came out suddenly into a little glade in the woods, in the center of which stood a large cylindrical stone. Its sides and upper surface were a solid mass of exquisite carving, in which the figures of birds, flowers and the form of the serpent were repeated in a riot of designs. ## Invention Came by Chance dea of the Sextant, invaluable to Sailors, Result of Observation Made by Philadelphia Glazier.

The element of chance plays an important role in invention, and in no case is this more strikingly illustrated than in that of Thomas Godfrey, the mechanic who improved upon the sextant, or, rather, devised the sextant, the basic notion for which he got by noting the reflection of the sun from a pall of water.

Godfrey was a glazier by trade, but he had a taste for mathematics and was a man of some culture. John Hadley had also invented a sextant, apparently a development of a suggestion of Kowtow's, found among his papers at his death. Godfrey, who had been at work in the

but for a long time his claims were not recognized, Hadley receiving the entire credit.

The glazier thus received his inspiration for the instrument that was to prove of such value to mariners. One day, while replacing a pane of glass in a window of a house in Philadelphia opposite a pump, he saw a girl, after filling her pail, put it upon the sidewalk. The glazier saw the sun reflected from the window in which he had been at work in the perceived the significance of the situation, and he was thus led to the design of an instrument "for drawing the line down to the horizon," a device incomparably superior to any that had hitherto been used for the ascertainment of angular measurements.—Harper's Weekly.

The lives of men who have been ways growing are strewn along whole course with things they learned to do without.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. ## THIS LADY'S GOOD APPETITE

Mrs. Hansen, in a Letter From Mobile, Tells How She Gained It.

Mobile, Ala.—"I suffered for seven years, with womanly trouble," writes Mrs. Sigurd Hansen in a letter from this city. "I felt weak and always had a headache and was always going to the doctor. At last I was operated on, and felt better, but soon I had the same trouble."

My husband asked me to try Cardui. I felt better after the first bottle, and now I have a good appetite and sleep well. I feel fine, and the doctor tells me I am looking better than he ever saw me."

If you are sick and miserable, and suffer from any of the pains due to womanly trouble—try Cardui.

Cardui is successful because it is composed of ingredients that have been found to act curatively on the womanly constitution.

For more than fifty years, it has been used by women of all ages, with great success. Try it. Your druggist sells it.
